

Lung Cheung Government Secondary School

Dozens of students gathered in Lung Cheung's school hall on January 7.

It was a beautiful day, so why weren't they playing basketball in the school playground that afternoon?

Here's why: they were all determined to improve their DSE results by taking part in a mock inter-school English speaking exam. Students from Lung Cheung and Ng

The mock exam provided ideal preparation for the students

Wah Catholic Secondary School came together for the event, where they were divided into groups. They stole eager glances at the strange new faces in their groups, each one wondering how they would fare. Anticipation was high as the Assistant Principal, Cheng Hoo-keung, started the competition.

Two sets of mock DSE group discussion papers were ready, and at the signal, the students gleefully dove into the task. Each group was led by a teacher who graded the discussion and offered valuable advice to each individual student on how to improve their performance. The event lasted about an hour later. Many pictures were taken and the students left the hall knowing that the mock exam had given them a big boost as they prepared for this year's HKDSE.
